CHANGES

Publishers that we deal with around the world have, in the past year, been asking for series of books more and more often. Additionally, we are now working with numerous authors with great collections of books that are available for translation. Thus we have been concentrating on getting the most efficient way to help them accomplish their goals.

DROPBOX

At last we have found a helpful answer! We are very pleased to announce a fast and simple way for you to share files with us here at Global Book Rights and for us to immediately get these files to good, trusted, interested publishers around the world...

SENDING FILES - A newly created tab called Dropbox that we've put on our website now allows our followers to submit files to Global Book Rights instantly with just a few clicks. You can avoid the hassles of wondering if your file is too big for email or having to send numerous emails with attachments – and instead simply submit any size file in a matter of seconds by going to our Dropbox tab and then following the couple of steps there.

RECEIVING FILES - Likewise those interested in getting files don't have to cope with receiving email after email with attachments that won't fit on one email. They can simply let us know what files they want and if we are working with them we will send the files to them via Dropbox. If we haven't received them from a publisher, agent or author we can have them use Dropbox to quickly get them to us.

TIMES CHANGE

Remember when faxes seemed like the new great way to communicate? And then email attachments? And then problems with sending books that were too large for one email? Thankfully, creative new concepts keep coming along. Dropbox can make life easier for all of us marketing and buying rights to books and so we're really glad to be able to bring our readers this new service.

QUESTIONS?

You probably have some questions about this and we'll be happy to answer of them so we can make business easier and smoother for you☺.
